2019 Closing the Hunger Gap conference is hosted by the Food Bank of Central & Eastern North Carolina and Inter-Faith Food Shuttle.

Closing the Hunger Gap (CTHG) is a national network of organizations and individuals working to expand hunger relief efforts beyond food distribution toward strategies that promote social justice and address the root causes of hunger, using the lens of racial and economic equity.

Forward-thinking food banks and partners across the country are re-imagining their work to include nutrition education, culinary job training, workforce development, small business incubation, connecting farmers to institutional buyers, and more. The fourth bi-annual national conference will be a vibrant, diverse, and inspiring event focused on inequities in the food system. The conference will provide a platform to learn about innovative programs, network with peers, and explore solutions moving forward.

Sponsoring CTHG offers national name recognition. Over 800 attendees from across the United States and Canada are expected, representing emergency food providers; policy makers; non-profit leaders focused on health, education, and food justice; farmers and more.
